chough peace was then declared, the Druses have since assassinated every Christian who came in their way, with an evident determination to make the number of the Maronite loss equal to that of the Druses. This aroused the Christians and so exasperated them that they made an attack upon several Druse villages. At first they were successful, but relying upon their numbers, they neglected to appoint leaders, or to form any plan for the campaign, consequently the Druses rallied under their warrior chiefs and lurned every Maronite and Greek Christian village within their teach. The provincial authorities pronounced the invading party—the Christians—to be rebels, and the Guvernor General proceeded withfull his available force to the mountains, and brought his cannot to bear upon the Christians, checking them at every turn, while the Druses, aided by the soldiery, carried on their work of pillage and number in a manner shameful even to a North American Indian.

From this town, pursuing down the brown the bord of the lofty and picturesque l'ine Bluff, most remarkable remains in antique graves and mounds of the lofty and picturesque l'ine Bluff, most remarkable remains in antique graves and mounds of this great aboriginal race—all tongueless and with broad, flat stones and filled with the mondering ruins of human skeletons, still seem to resound ghostly echos of the far-off centuries, eloquent voices! Here the antiquarian might disport himself for a good season, making bis daily researches in view of the magnificent scenery stretching out beneath him. Here green islands loom out the silver waves of the majestic river; while hillowy forests on her far-winding shores toos their grouning hranches in the vinuls, and a thousand sounds reverberate from woody hill and attentive highland.
